1. BACKGROUND

1.1. Western Australian Screen Industry Diversity and Inclusion Roadmap 2017-2023

In 2016-17, with Screenwest's support, the Western Australian screen industry undertook a thorough research and consultation process to develop an industry wide diversity strategy. The resultant document is the Western Australian Screen Industry Diversity Roadmap 2017-2023 [the Roadmap].

The Screenwest Diversity, Equity and Inclusion Plan [the Plan] builds upon this work, affirming Screenwest's commitment to diversity, identifying aims, and specifying activities to be carried out in 2017-18. The Plan will be reviewed and updated annually.

1.2. What is Diversity and Inclusion?

The Australian Human Rights Commission refers to diversity as the differences that distinguish groups of people from one another.

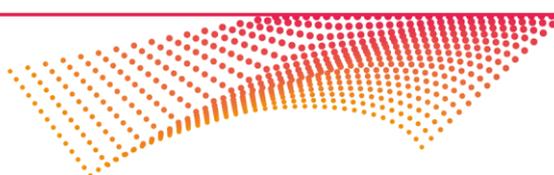

More specifically, as identified in the industry Roadmap and adopted for this Plan, Screenwest recognises diversity as differences in gender; age; Aboriginal identity; cultural and linguistic diversity (CaLD); disability; sexuality and gender identities, including lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, queer and intersex (LGBTQI+); location (including regional and remote regions) and socio-economic status.

1.3. Screen Industry Diversity Benchmark Demographics

Diversity in Western Australia is mainstream, and is a lived reality of the contemporary community. We make up the most diverse population of all Australian states, in one of the most diverse nations in the world. Alongside an Indigenous population of over 50 language groups that continue to have strong relationships to country, Western Australia is a state of migrants, with nearly 40% of the population born overseas.¹ A vibrant, passionate LGBTQI+ community exists in the state.

Nearly 2.5 million people reside in Western Australia; 10% of the Australian population.¹

Snapshot of who we are:

- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander's make up 3.1% of the WA population, however, of all Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander's living in Australia, 11.7% reside in the State.¹
- Cultural and Linguistic Diversity - 25% speak a language other than English.¹
- Gender split is 50:50.¹
- 21.4% live outside the Greater Perth area.¹
- 14% have a disability.²
- Nationally, 11% of the population identifies as LGBTIQ+.³

Screenwest funded data snapshot 2010-2015

Like other screen agencies across the country, Screenwest tracks gender and Indigenous participation amongst 'key creative' screen workers (producers, writers and directors), but does not currently record data around other forms of diversity.

Gender

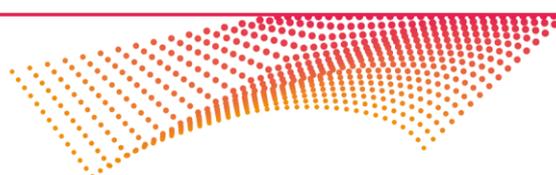

Screenwest's gender data shows that women, while making a strong showing as producers (53%), are dramatically underrepresented as directors (at 20%) and writers (36%) on funded projects. These figures are slightly better than Screen Australia's national average figures in relation to, for example, feature films, in which women tracked at 32% of producers, 23% of writers and 16% of directors between 2010 and 2015.

It is important to note that of the Screenwest funded skills development opportunities over the past five years, the gender split is more swayed towards females.

It is also of relevant to note that the majority of productions receiving funding through the Screenwest Production rounds are strong in Western Australian crew representation and Western Australian producers, but few have Western Australian writers and/or directors attached. This is an issue Screenwest continue to focus on.

Over the past five years, the majority of Western Australian productions have been dominated by male-skewed storylines and/or male key talent. Screenwest management are also aware that there is a large disparity in gender on production crews, although there is no available data on this.

From 2010 to 2015, more applications to Screenwest came from men (54%, a ratio of 1.3 male to 1 female) although women were marginally more successful in their applications (60% success rate compared to 56% for men). This suggests that the issues are more systemic than a simple question of conscious or unconscious bias on the part of the assessment panel. Broader industry dynamics create career barriers for women in the screen sector – as highlighted in Screen Australia’s 2015 discussion paper Gender Matters: Women in the Australian Screen Industry – including time out of the workforce for family and a dominance of men in decision making roles, in both screen and related industries (such as distribution and advertising).

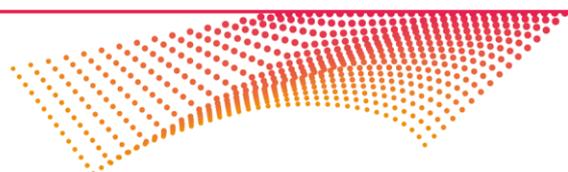

Indigenous

Indigenous elements are found on-screen in a relatively high number of productions funded by Screenwest. Screenwest has a long-standing planned approach to Indigenous participation, including the current Screenwest Indigenous Screen Strategy 2016-2020, to ensure that the State’s Indigenous screen sector continues to grow and develop, that there are clear career pathways for Indigenous filmmakers, and that Indigenous stories are told on screen. This approach has yielded tangible results in supporting Western Australian Indigenous creative screen practice.

Indigenous key creatives are attached to approximately 20% of Screenwest supported productions. Most of these are specifically targeted initiatives through the Screenwest Indigenous Screen Strategy and the Indigenous funding programs associated with this.

Cultural and Linguistic Diversity

No current data exists on levels of cultural and linguistic diversity (CALD) amongst Western Australian screen practitioners, but a general observation of key players suggests low levels of participation and that the majority of the screen stories supported by Screenwest have no identifiable multicultural elements and low levels of cultural diversity amongst key content creators and talent.

Disability

There is no available data or information around screen practitioners living with a disability or on-screen representations of disability in Western Australian content. An example of Western Australian screen content in this area is The Dreamhouse, the Artemis International factual series that broadcast on the ABC.

LGBTQI

No current data in Western Australia or Screenwest driven initiatives to encourage participation by practitioners with non-straight sexualities or gender identities in the screen sector.

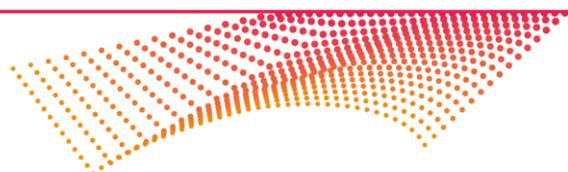

Age

The majority of applications received by Screenwest are submitted by the 25-45 age group.

The largest portion of successful applications come from the 45+ age group who had a 62% success rate. This may be a reflection of the level of skill, experience and ability to attach market to a project. The 45+ age group was followed by the 25-45 age group (n=835) who had a 57% success rate.

Regional

A significant proportion of Screenwest funded projects have a regional element. The launch of the Western Australian Regional Film Fund (2016) has further encouraged more regional production in the State.

2. SCREENWEST DIVERSITY, EQUITY AND INCLUSION PLAN

2.1. Our Commitment to Diversity, Equity and Inclusion

In the services we offer and the outcomes we support, Screenwest seeks to reflect the diversity of Western Australia's community to inspire greater creativity and authenticity, to widen the talent pool and offer fairer access to the screen industry, to introduce new voices and untold stories from across the State and to grow the audiences watching the content we support.

- Audiences today are far more diverse than much of the current Screenwest funded screen content would suggest. To resonate with audiences, Western Australian screen stories should reflect the diversity of experiences and perspectives of contemporary Australian society.

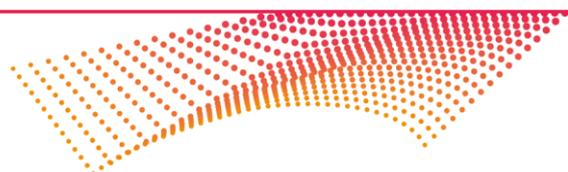

2.2. Objectives

Screenwest objectives through the Plan are to:

- Working with the screen industry, build the Western Australian industry to a competitive, critical mass; an industry that understands and values diversity and inclusion in every aspect of its business and product.
- Evolve and grow the local industry to more closely reflect the overall diversity of Western Australia's population in the stories told, talent supported, practitioners employed and audiences viewing our content.

2.3. Performance Indicators

In the research and development stage of the Plan it became evident that Screenwest is not collecting sufficient data to adequately benchmark current levels of engagement of many underrepresented groups, therefore it is difficult to set specific targets in these areas. The statistics are clear in gender and Indigenous representation, and therefore specific Performance Indicators have been set in these areas. Please note these are not quotas, they are performance indicators to measure the effectiveness of Screenwest's activity in diversity.

The indicators will be reported on in the Screenwest Annual Report.

Gender:

- In 2017-18, Screenwest's skills development funding programs achieve gender parity, through greater representation of females.

Stretch target:

- By 2020, Screenwest funded productions will have 50:50 gender equity across key creative roles as follows:
 - Features and Scripted TV: Writer, Director, Producer, Lead Role
 - Factual Programs: Writer, Director, Producer, Key Talent/presenter

Indigenous:

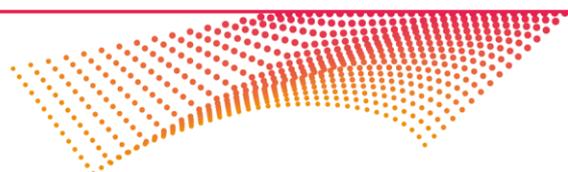

- 10% minimum of Screenwest's Production Investment (not inclusive of special initiatives that form part of Screenwest's Indigenous program) have a Western Australian Indigenous filmmaker in an above-the-line key creative role. (As per Screenwest's Indigenous Screen Strategy 2015-2020.)

Specific targets in other areas of diversity will be set in subsequent years when Screenwest have captured adequate data for these areas.

2.4. Strategic Priorities

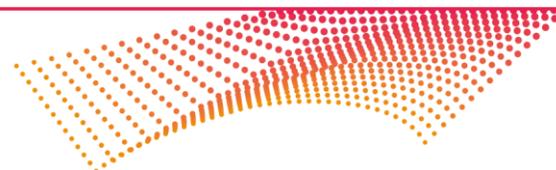

In the context of finite resources (budget and staffing), Screenwest identified six strategic areas to be addressed in 2017-18:

- (1) Leadership
- (2) Organisational
- (3) Funding Programs
- (4) Pathways and Career Development
- (5) Infrastructure
- (6) Community Engagement.
